Orientation to NYC:

This is my quick and dirty orientation to New York City. You need to learn there are 5 boroughs of New York and they are Queens, Staten Island, the Bronx, Manhattan and Brooklyn. "With 8 million residents and a land area of 322 square miles (830 km²), New York City has the highest population density of any major city in North America.[2][3] The city's metropolitan area, with a population of 18.8 million, ranks among the largest urban areas in the world." <http://en.wikipedia.org>

Now that you have the boroughs right in your head I'll let you know from any high up perch you will also see Jersey City of New Jersey right along side New York.

Now I'll focus on Manhattan the largest of the boroughs, it's so big you are going to have to learn the districts of the city and explore them as your heart desires. Here are some of the districts that are all distinct:

Upper West Side	Midtown	NoLita
Central Park	Garmet District	SoHo
Upper East Side	Art Gallery District	NoHo
Morningside Heights	Flower Distrcit	Little Italy
Harlem	Murray Hill	Lower East Side
East Harlem	Flatiron District	Chinatown
El Barrio	Gramercy	Tribeca
Carnegie Hill	Chelsea	Battery Park City
Turtle Bay	Meatpacking District	Financial District
Clinto-Hell's Kitchen	West Village	Seaport Historic District
Theater District	Greenwich Village
Times Square	Alphabet City
Diamond District	East Village

So I think this gives you the idea. I did get to a few of these and have separate tips on them so you'll have to do your research and pick and area to enjoy!

Fondest Memory: Some of my favorite districts were Chinatown, Times Square, Theater District, Central Park and Tribeca.

Now that I've given you the boroughs here is how they got their names:

Brooklyn is named after the Dutch city Breukelen. The Dutch you see were the first apparently to come over to this area from Europe.

The name Manhattan derives from the word Manna-hata, which translates into "island of many hills" in Lenape.

The Bronx was first settled by Europeans in 1639, when Jonas Bronck arrived. The Dutch and English settlers referred to the area as "Bronck's Land".

Queens - I am not going to give you this one.

Staten Island - Although the first Dutch settlement of the New Netherlands colony was made on Manhattan in 1620, Staaten Eylandt remained uncolonized by the Dutch for many decades. From 1639 to 1655, the Dutch made three separate attempts to establish a permanent settlement on the island, but each time the settlement was destroyed in the conflicts between the Dutch and the local tribes.

If your wondering about the term "Big Apple" I would recommend this web site at <http://www.barrypopik.com>

We used these van services to get 16 people around town and back and forth to airports, etc. They were great and very reasonable in price.
